The Most Photographed
Woman in the World
From photographs never

Campbell Art Co. N.Y.

HER face was her fortune—or misfortune—as one looks at it. It has been described and pictured over so much that it needs only a brief word here.

Imagine a mass of lovely, rippling hair, eyes that are dark, soft, dense and appealing as a man's sometimes, a nose some too perfect, but piquant enough to add an odd little contradiction to the eyes, and a mouth that seems almost quivering always, daintily curved as to its lips and so sensitive to all emotions as a flower is to every breeze that passes—the face of half child, half woman.

It was this sweetly appealing look of innocence of the nun or the child that made the face of Evelyn Thaw so winsome and seductive. One may add a significant comment when one mentions the fact that she has been photographed over five hundred times and that she has herself forgotten the number of her poses.

The pictures of Evelyn Thaw on this page are unique. In the first place, they have never been reproduced before, and in addition they have the singular interest about them that the poses were especially arranged under the immediate guidance of Stanford White himself. Under his personal direction the face of the model was made to express certain fanciful ideas he had. One is labeled "Little Butterfly," another "Heart's Desire," still a third "Enraptured." They were the artist's idealizations of a beautiful face expressed in symbols.

In a short time now the name of Evelyn Thaw will be upon all men's lips again in the final disposition of the most sensational murder case of the new century. It was this beautiful face that made two such deadly enemies that one killed the other without warning and without remorse.

THE BIRTH OF THE NEW VOLCANIC ISLAND, AS WITNESSED FROM THE DECK OF THE U. S. S. ALBATROSS.

LIEUTENANT HEBURN, of the United States Navy, navigating officer of the U.S.S. Albatross, states that the volcano, has just had the extraordinary experience of witnessing the birth of a new island.

In the only man alive who has had the experience, and indeed there is no record of any one ever having witnessed such a happening, although it must have occurred with great frequency upon the globe's surface.

The Albatross, which is constantly employed in making discoveries in the deep sea, was cruising off the Alaskan Islands, which stretch out westward from Alaska, forming the division between Bering Sea and the Pacific Ocean. The sea is latitude 55.00 north and longitude 160 west when the astounding phenomenon occurred. The spot lies about fifty miles northwest of Unalaska Island and over the Bering Sea Islands, which are of volcanic origin.

Lieutenant Heburn was on deck shortly after sunrise, when his attention was attracted by an extraordinary disturbance of the water. The surface was covered by a low, dark, and dense fog, which was not unlike a dense mist. Mrs. Halsey Corbin, the New York Beauty, Whose Photograph Was Found In the Montenegro Prince's Possession.

"The Prince was in the very act of removing a splendid diamond tiara from her head. In her hand she held a magnificent bouquet of white flowers."

THIS saying that history repeats itself in one of the most recent events.

We may be certain that even the most romantic, most picturesque and most dramatic events that fascinate our minds in the history of the past will repeat themselves in our time or in the future.

In Paris a criminal has just revived the methods which have made Lucretia Borgia's name infamous immortal in history and synonymous with ingenuity and wholesale poisoning.

The modern Lucretia Borgia is a prince. He bears the title and name of Prince Tschilindro of Montenegro. There is some doubt about his title, but it is difficult to dispute it, for the Montenegro nobility women by means of his ingenuity poison.

The Prince has just been arrested at the Grand Hotel in Paris on a charge of attempting to steal a costly diamond tiara from a rich American woman, whose name is withheld by the Parisian police, according to their custom, but who is said to be a Mrs. Annabel Gardner, of Chicago.

The Prince was calling on Mrs. Gardner, having accepted an invitation to dinner. A waiter entered unexpectedly and found him alone with the woman, who was unconscious. The Prince was in the very act of removing a splendid diamond tiara from her head. In her hand she held a magnificent bouquet of white flowers, which the Prince had evidently just picked to her.

When the police arrived on their feet up to the waist in the Prince's arms, they found him holding the woman, who was unconscious. The Prince was in the very act of removing a splendid diamond tiara from her head. In her hand she held a magnificent bouquet of white flowers, which the Prince had evidently just picked to her.

found a large collection of photographs of women whose acquaintances he had enjoyed, and among them being many Americans, rich and famous, and well known in American and European society. One of these photographs was evidently that of Mrs. Halsey Corbin, the handsome young woman whose alleged loss of a diamond tiara was the cause of the Prince's arrest.

The police began a thorough investigation of the Prince's past and found that he was a thoroughly accomplished poisoner. He always took a fine and elegant dinner at the principal hotel. He had a very imposing appearance, tall, straight, with black hair, waxed mustache and imperial and an alchemist complexion.

He habitually sought the acquaintance of women possessing few jewels and the majority of his victims were Americans who were fascinated by the idea of receiving attention from a Prince. He offered them from her hand, his victim a bouquet of flowers, and while she was unconscious, he robbed her of her jewels. The police would only be able to conjecture what had occurred in the majority of instances. The women, however, had complained to hotel proprietors and to the police, but usually they were advised to leave the matter alone.

When they returned they did not find their jewels, but they did not know the Prince was in the room. They were in the room, but they did not know the Prince was in the room. They were in the room, but they did not know the Prince was in the room.

It is interesting to recall that they were the society of a fascinating foreign Prince. The inference, at the moment, would have been that they had been interested. When they returned they did not find their jewels, but they did not know the Prince was in the room. They were in the room, but they did not know the Prince was in the room.

They used poisons which could kill instantly, and poisons which would keep the victim lingering for years. According to reports of the period, they made poisons so deadly that in compounding them it was necessary to wear a glass mask, with cut which would have been heretofore to the compounder.

The Borgia also possessed a wonderful collection of poison rings. One of these rings had on the outside a small, sharp point. In the interior was a chamber filled with poison. When a man pressed the ring the poison entered the hand, and the victim by his own act secured a little of the deadly poison, which, entering the small wound, quickly caused death. To destroy an enemy while shaking his hand was a typically Borgia proceeding. The character of Lucretia Borgia has been reborn in the modern world, but in spite of that she occupies an undisturbed position in literature and the popular imagination as the archest and most brilliant, unscrupulous and bloodthirsty agent of the world has ever known.

Lucretia Borgia was born in 1490, and died in 1519. At the age of eleven she was affianced to the Lord of Val d'Ay, but she was betrothed to a Spanish, despoiled six bulls in the bull ring, and was engaged on her wedding day to Don Gonzalo, a nobleman of the Duke of Braganza, and of her brother's rival.

HOW TO CARE FOR ONE'S GARMENTS. When washing a shirt, it is important to use the right method. The shirt should be washed in cold water, and it should be wrung out carefully. The shirt should then be ironed while it is still damp. This will keep the shirt from becoming stiff and brittle.

The Curious New Law Proposed in France to Yield a Revenue on Sparkling Eyes, Pretty Lips, Creamy Complexions, Nicely Proportioned Busts, Etc.

Paris, Oct. 12. THE legislators of France are constantly working their heads to find new methods of taxation, and the latest suggestion is to place a tax upon every individual possessing a perfectly developed figure, counting facial features, limbs and so forth, and in the case of persons who are not perfectly developed, to deduct from the tax a certain percentage for every feature that is defective.

Universal interest must be felt in this law, because in its application to women it is really a tax upon personal beauty. Sparkling eyes, pretty lips, creamy complexion, nicely proportioned busts, will pay a higher tax than dull, weak eyes, bloodless lips, yellow complexion and scrawny build.

The suggested law may sound preposterous to English-speaking people, but it will appear less so when the peculiar French system of taxation is understood. The French are an intensely logical people and they never hesitate to carry their logical tendencies to an absurd extreme. They have discovered by careful observation that the natural tendency of every man is to avoid the payment of taxes and to conceal the existence of taxable property. Therefore the logical policy of the government is to place taxes on those things which it is impossible, or least possible, to conceal. First among these must be counted the human body and its most pleasing features, after that the dwelling place of men and all articles of constant daily use.

Already there is in France a tax for just living, which everybody must pay. It is called the direct contribution, and amounts to 375 francs a year. A French franc is, of course, equivalent to twenty cents in American money.

There is a tax on nearly every essential feature of a dwelling house. There is a tax on every window and every door, the same varying with the size of the object taxed and the value of the house. The total tax is equal to about thirty per cent. of the rent. It might be thought that this tax would induce people to leave so few windows and doors as possible, but that does not appear to be the case, doubtless because doors and windows are so convenient.

There is a tax of twenty francs a year on every billiard table and of ten francs a year on every piano. The latter tax might meet with approval in other countries, because it raises a large revenue and breaks the frequency of an instrument that is sometimes considered a danger to the public health.

Nearly all domestic animals have to pay a tax. On pet dogs, which the French happily call "chiens de luxe" or "dogs of luxury," there is an annual tax of ten francs, while on "chiens de garde," or watch dogs, it is only three francs.

All kinds of outwits, which are placed in windows and other public places, pay a tax in the form of a license stamp. Commercial hotels in which parties are made pay a similar tax. Even candles are taxed. Some of the other objects from which French legislators ingeniously extract revenue are automobiles, carriages, bicycles, coats of arms and armorial decorations of all kinds, railway tickets, salt, playing cards and decorations worn upon the person. Many other things are taxed which it is needless to mention here.

Other Odd French Taxes.

M. Henri Rochefort proposed to place a tax on all titles of nobility, the amount increasing from the rank of baron up to that of duke. The government would make no inquiry into the authenticity of titles and would place no obstacle in the way of persons assuming them. This plan has been approved by many persons, but it has some serious objections apart from those raised by existing title-bearers who do not wish to be made objects of special taxation. Its chief effect would be to increase the number of bogus titles, because these paying taxes would feel that they had acquired a right to them, but eventually it would lead to the abandonment of all titles, because of the expense and the ridicule resulting from having them in this bartered manner.

An urgent need is now felt of some new and lucrative form of taxation, and it was as a substitute for the suggested tax upon titles that M. Alphonse Durand proposed the personal tax or "impôt humain." There has been a long debate upon the details of this law, and the controversy still rages in public meetings and in the press. The newspapers opposing the law are publishing many cartoons casting ridicule upon it. An example of these may be seen in the series of sketches by the witty artist Daubigny in the illustration. A vast number of persons are violently opposed to the law on the ground that it is a gross violation of personal liberty, but France has already gone so far in that direction that the objection receives little attention.

The proposal as originally drafted is to place a certain tax upon every person possessing an especially perfect body, including good eyes, hair, teeth, nose, complexion, all the arms and a well-developed muscular system. The basis of the law is founded on the ground that those possessing perfect physical attributes owe them to the good environment, which some surroundings and social advantages which have been secured them by the government of the country, and that in consequence of possessing them they are much more fortunate than those who are handicapped by the lack of them. For instance, girls having them all can usually secure rich husbands if they wish to.

It is argued that it is only fair to reduce the tax on every feature of the body that is defective, because these defects often arise from the fact that the sufferer has not received the best treatment from society and because he or she is handicapped by them in the struggle for life.

In France thousands of women are earning a splendid living by the display of their charms in theatrical and other public performances. Many of them are not content to act, dance or sing. They merely exhibit the attractions which kind nature has bestowed upon them through no merit or effort of their own. They put forth no mental exertion and a very trifling physical one and yet they are the most highly paid members of the community.

In fact their beauty is their stock in trade. Any other Frenchman or woman has to put up with heavy taxes on his capital or stock in trade, but this particular form of capital escapes taxation altogether, although it yields the largest revenue with the minimum of exertion. Since this aspect of the question was France.

placed by M. Durand clearly before the thinking men and women of France the desirability of the proposed tax on beauty has been more widely appreciated. It has received the hearty support of a vast number of noble and worthy women, who work hard and pay heavy taxes but do not possess the superficial attractions which yield so large an income with so little work.

The total taxable value of a perfect body is 100 francs or $20. Every perfect feature of it pays a certain percentage of this total. Thus a perfect head of natural hair contributes 15 francs, or $3; well formed ears, 10 francs, or $2; blue eyes, 15 francs, or $3; well rounded bust, 15 francs, or $3; graceful arms, 10 francs, or $2; shapely waist, 10 francs, or $2; properly proportioned feet and ankles, 10 francs, or $2.

For every departure from perfection there is a carefully proportioned rebate from the maximum tax. A completely bald person pays nothing on hair and a toothless one owes nothing to the statute on that score.

By way of illustrating the application of this new French revenue scheme, if it were a law in America it is probable, for instance, that the popular and beautiful American model, Mrs. Joseph E. Widener, would have to pay the full $20 beauty tax, whereas probably such a face and figure as that of Mrs. Howard Gould would escape the tax. The popular actresses and stage beauties would, of course, all yield a revenue to the government, and it has even been suggested that pretty children and perfectly formed infants be taxed.

Assessing the Various Features.

The frame of the law proposes with scientific thoroughness to include the entire body in the search for taxable values. There has been violent opposition to this section of the law on the ground that it would involve an invasion of private modesty that would be insupportable even in France. The opponents of this provision wish to confine the assessment to the ordinary visible features, such as the hair, eyes, nose, teeth, hands and feet, and to the limbs, with reference to their length but without reference to their exact contour. On the other hand, it is urged that justice and the law should not be swayed by considerations of artificial modesty.

A grave question that arises out of this law is the effect it will have on the future development of personal beauty, especially in the fair sex.

Will the desire to escape taxation be strong enough to lead women to mar their most beautiful features? Will it lead them to reveal to the tax-collector the symptoms by which they have led the public to believe that they possessed advantages which nature had never bestowed upon them? It is predicted by some experts that there will be a great "revival" of personal beauty. The phrase is in an entirely different sense from that which Americans give it. These people believe a large line of women who will go down to the tax-collector's office and demonstrate that the beauty which leads the admiration of society over the fitness of their contour to pulling; that the luxurious dresses which have inspired poets are clearly wrong; that the pearls which illuminate their smiles are the work of the dentist; that their lovely complexions are outwits of the chemist's and painter's art, and so forth.

The more hopeful supporters of the law believe that most women will pay anything rather than reveal the fictitious character of any of their charms, and that when they are married their husbands, as dutiful Frenchmen, will cheerfully pay the full tax rather than admit that there are any flaws in their wives' figures.

What American women would swear off any taxes on her person, and what American husband would be so mean as to wish to save his pocket at the expense of his wife's reputation for beauty?

Some feminine authorities, however, say that there is something the depths of masculine jealousy.

How will the possession of indisputable attractions meet the law? Women, it is pointed out, who possess genuine physical charms usually take pains to bring them to the notice of society and to demonstrate their genuineness. It is believed that they would welcome the opportunity to pay the tax in full, because it would give a legal guarantee of the reality of their charms.

Girls paying the full personal tax would form a class by themselves, a sort of aristocracy of beauty, into which everybody would strive to enter. The members of this class would be largely sought in marriage and would enjoy the homage of the entire nation. It might be desirable to issue certificates designating them to be "No. 1 Guaranteed Beauties."

On account of the universal pride in womanly beauty, M. Durand is sure that his law will bring in an enormous revenue and give general satisfaction to all.

Widener, the Lovely and Popular Newport Society Woman Who Would Pay the Maximum Tax On Beauty: Mrs. Howard Gould, of New York, Who Would Obtain Rebates on Certain Features, and Madame Regina Badet, the Impersonator of "Aphrodite," a Typical French Beauty, from Whom the Legislature Expect to Collect the Full Tax.'

Pathetic Tragedies of the Recent Storm Among Light-house Keepers on the Solitary Reefs and Islands of the Gulf.

44 LIGHT-HOUSES TWISTED, CRUMBLED OR SWEEPED INTO THE SEA!

How the Horn Lighthouse Was Swept Away, Drowning the Lighthouse Keeper and His Wife and His Little Daughters.

It was a fatal wave that wrought a terrible tragedy on one of the great light-houses of the Gulf of Mexico.

The lighthouse keeper told of the tragedy that was done during the recent storm on that coast, of the destruction of property, of the loss of human life, of the loss of the history of the lighthouse, of the loss of the history of the lighthouse, of the loss of the history of the lighthouse.

Not on any known coast of any of the Gulf states, between the mouth of the Mississippi river and Mobile, Alabama, has there been a lighthouse struck by a wave of the great sea that has swept into the Gulf of Mexico.

Whether they stood on the mainland or upon the islands that fringe it, none could withstand the weight of the dreadful wall of water. Though the skill and experience of Government engineers had been exhausted and had been believed to have made these structures impregnable to more fierce pressure of wind and waves than had ever been recorded, the structures crumbled, twisted and otherwise disabled, or even obliterated with the very abscissa on which they stood.

In most instances, happily, the keepers of the lighthouses and their families either got away in their own boats or were rescued. In other cases they were not so lucky. According to latest reports received by the Lighthouse Board at Washington, the light at East Passacawamus is gone entirely, though at that point there was no loss of life.

But this was owing to the extraordinary heaving and pitching of the waves, and the fact that the lighthouse was situated on a small island, and the waves were so high that they were able to reach the top of the lighthouse, and the waves were so high that they were able to reach the top of the lighthouse, and the waves were so high that they were able to reach the top of the lighthouse.

It was soon seen by the keeper, whose wife and two babies he brought refuge in the tower, that when the waves were so high that they were able to reach the top of the lighthouse, and the waves were so high that they were able to reach the top of the lighthouse.

The wind reached a hurried them against the building, and the waves were so high that they were able to reach the top of the lighthouse, and the waves were so high that they were able to reach the top of the lighthouse.

At last the waves were so high that they were able to reach the top of the lighthouse, and the waves were so high that they were able to reach the top of the lighthouse.

Before the ferryboat had left the Long Island side a man came aboard with a dog. The dog was one of those "bluffer" dogs. Bluffing is purely an animal or brute instinct; that is why dogs are as good at it as men are. That dog was one of those curs that bark at everything. He had no more than got aboard the boat when he began looking for things to bark at. He barked at the porters until they kicked at him, then he

When he saw that dog frightening children he wanted to go and settle him, but I wouldn't let him get out of the automobile. I told him that if he just let that dog alone a while he would have a foolish wind-up. Those fellows always get too gay and run up against something tough before they get through. HOW LONG WILL THEY BOW DOWN?

SUPERSTITION ruled the world at one time—millions of men and women were butchered in honor of idols, piles of dead bodies, greater than all the pyramids, have been heaved up as a tribute to superstition's dreadful brutality.

The religion of to-day, with its great inspiring idea of one God, benevolent and just, inaugurated long ago the ultimate destruction of superstition as the governing force among men.

ARMED POWER ruled men for ages. The sharp sword, the mounted soldier in his armor, rushing against the helpless, half-naked man, were typical of the reign of brute force on earth for many centuries. NOW THE POWER THAT RULES IS MONEY.

For ages men knelt before the blood-stained idols.

For ages they knelt before the fighting man in armor.

And now they kneel, humble, submissive and reverent, before the piled up mound of money.

How long is it to last? How long will MONEY, which is only frozen labor, dominate the souls and the hearts that work and CREATE the money?

How long will the voice of criminally organized Trust capital be louder and more powerful than the voices of ALL the people?

How long will a million MEN stand in awe of a million DOLLARS?

How long will ONE man with a thousand and millions have more power in the land than a thousand men with a million times the other's morality, with a million times his virtue, intellect and righteousness of purpose?

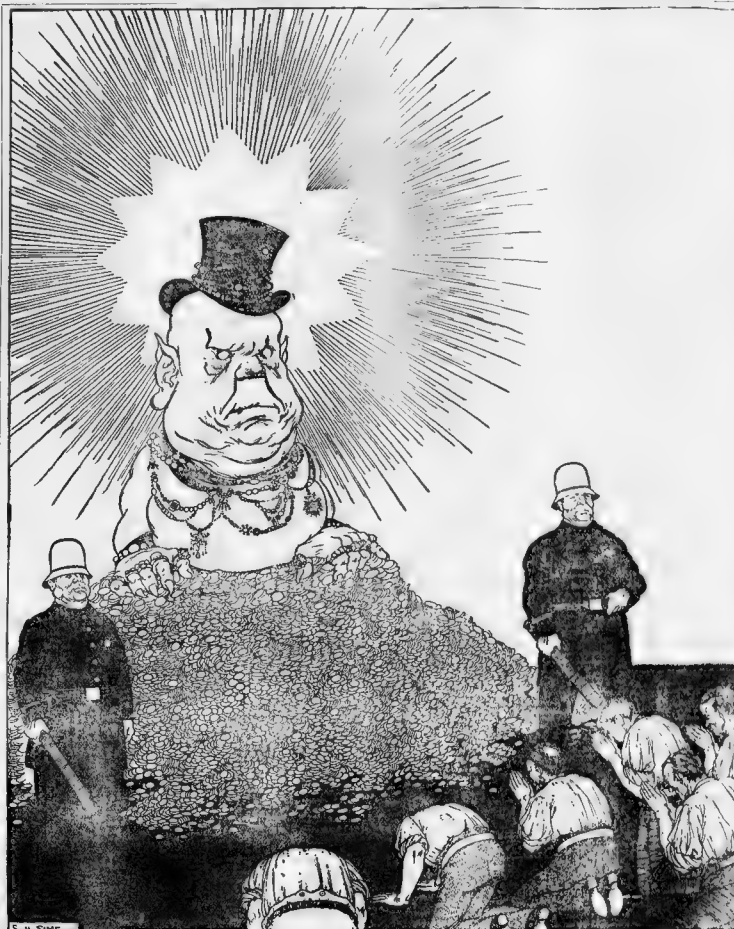

It must not be denied by any intelligent man that we live in a country where Capital, without a soul, cunningly and criminally organized in dominating Trusts, RULES all the people and controls their welfare.

This condition must be met by rebellion of the people. Better conditions must be brought about by that spirit of just rebellion that has worked for good in all the centuries past, tearing down the idols, freeing their victims, stripping the armed man of his steel and his sword and putting him to work at the plow.

Fortunately, the rebellion that is called for today is a PEACEFUL REBELLION. It need be only a rebellion of the ballots against the billions, a rebellion of the intellect and the soul of man against the Trust cunning that has no soul.

The growth in power and in arrogance of criminal Trust capital has been marvellously swift. There is no caution, no fear, no respect any longer for the public feeling in the men that direct organized Trust crime.

The country has been shocked hitherto at the knowledge that INDIVIDUAL men upon the bench were there to represent the money piled up in Trust vaults, AND NOT THE HUMAN BEINGS FOR WHOM THE LAWS WERE MADE.

Is accumulated money THE ONLY THING worthy of respect and veneration in our Republic?

But INDIVIDUAL judges, judiciously placed on the bench, no longer satisfy the Trust ambition.

In the State of New York, where the Trusts and Trust power centre, these Trusts have actually dared to present to the people AN ENTIRE JUDICIARY TICKET NAMED BY A COMMITTEE OF TRUST LAWYERS, HEADED BY JOSEPH H. CHOATE, THE LAWYER FOR THE GAS TRUST.

The Trusts have grown so bold that they dare put before the people a ticket SELECTED ABSOLUTELY BY THEMSELVES, picked out by Choate, who, in the same week dared to select the people's judges, went into court, and, for pay, denied the constitutional RIGHT of the people to control a necessity of life and check a Trust's extortion.

In different ways this same thing is repeated throughout the country, in the middle West, in the extreme West, where railroads claim the right to name JUDGES now, as the bank in Jackson's time claimed the right to fill so many seats in Congress.

In many States corporations claim the RIGHT to murder young children in glass factories, cotton mills and tin mines, because their tender bodies can be turned into dollars.

There isn't an intelligent American who doesn't realize THAT HE LIVES IN A COUNTRY GOVERNED BY MONEY ORGANIZED INTO TRUSTS, AND NOT GOVERNED IN ANY SENSE OF THE WORD BY THAT MAJORITY OF THE CITIZENS FOR WHOM THE GOVERNMENT WAS ESTABLISHED.

Unfortunately, there are too many who kneel at the feet of the big pile of money and worship the brutal power on top of it.

There are too many who ignorantly believe that money is greater than men, and that there is some mysterious power or virtue in it which must not be trifled with.

All classes, from the individual merchant to the individual workman, are appealed to cunningly or threateningly by the power on top of the trust money heap.

The intelligent workman knows that this money power is a menace to him. It can nullify the strength of his unions, destroying them by ceasing production if need be.

It can close factories in one place and open them in another, IMPOVERISHING ENTIRE COMMUNITIES, AS IT HAS ALREADY DONE, OUT OF REVENGE.

And yet there are not wanting workmen on their knees in front of the money pile, just as servile and humble as any ignorant heathen bowing down to a stupid, grinning idol.

And the merchants, too, are enjayed and threatened in the same way. They are told that THEIR interests are the Trusts' interests, as though there COULD BE any community of interests between a great criminal effort at monopoly and an honest individual effort at legitimate production of wealth or legitimate commercial distribution.

It takes a long time for people to get up from their knees, to look squarely at the power that rules them, to realize its nature and conquer it.

It took humanity a long time to escape the rule of superstition. It took a long time to get rid of government by the man on horseback.

HOW LONG WILL IT TAKE TO GET RID OF GOVERNMENT BY THE MAN IN THE TRUST COUNTING ROOM, the man who pulls the strings of monopoly and controls LIFE'S NECESSITIES, because the people are weak enough to submit?

Reader, address plain questions to the individual whom you seek to influence. Ask him:

What is YOUR attitude toward this pile of money?

Are YOU an independent man, refusing submission to the threats of the Trusts? Or is there in YOUR heart a cringing feeling that it is perhaps SAFER and wiser on the whole to bow down with the others, take what you can get and not run the risk of manly protest?

You inherit a country and a government won for you by brave men, who would accept no argument, no threat, no bribe, in place of freedom.

Are YOU among those that of late have abandoned the right to self-government for a promise or in fear of a new one?

Are YOU controlled by the dictates of your conscience, by your feelings as a man, or by the will of the few that juggle the hundreds of millions of dollars and the millions of human beings?

Are you going to do your voting hereafter according to the nod of this monster on the money pile, OR ARE YOU GOING TO VOTE AS A MAN, standing on your feet, THINKING FOR YOURSELF?

SOCIETY NEWS AND NOTES.

FR. DEBEYNE'S DISCOVERY.

The history of the discovery of the Trappist Fathers' Phosphated Wine of Chateau is the history of a devoted life work of a devoted man—the Rev. Father Dr. Debyne. In secular life he was a distinguished physician of the faculty of Louvain, but by an irresistible religious call he was attracted to the brotherhood of the Trappist Fathers, and he took the vows and obligations of the Clerical order.

REV. FR. DEBYNE, Superior of the Grand Trappe de Namur.

But although he left the world, he continued his scientific studies. He founded a school of medicine, and for half a century worked unceasingly. It was his ambition to cure all the ills of humanity. Today his formulas are used by the Trappist Fathers to soothe the ills of suffering humanity. The Rev. Dr. Debyne's first aim was to bring strength to the weak, vigor and new vitality to the exhausted, new, rich blood to the anemic and debilitated, and health and happiness to all who lack it. In other words, he sought and found a remedy for anemia, chlorosis, livering diseases and neurasthenia. Ask your druggist, ask your physician or your trusted nurse what they think of the Trappist Fathers' Wine! If you are not well, have rest, this wine will build you up and make you well. Don't suffer and grow worse! Why should you, when at each druggist's drug store you can procure the Trappist Fathers' Wine?

Four Arguments to Show Profit in Real Estate

Here is a quartet of arguments that cannot be answered. They prove that the man who buys real estate with judgment makes no mistake. Note how the value of the bare land has doubled and tripled. It illustrates what the young man of to-day will have in his old age if he invests his savings in real estate. The following figures refer to the value of the land, exclusive of the buildings upon it:

LOCATION OF LAND.	FEET.	1885.	1906.
A—Nos. 199 to 201 Washington street, occupied by Sears Building.....	11,000	$490,000	$1,238,200
B—No. 208 Washington street, occupied by Rogers Building.....	6,200	262,000	579,700
C—Corner Washington and Winter streets, north side of Winter.....	7,600	350,000	685,400
D—Corner Washington and Summer streets, south side of Summer.....	6,700	268,000	737,400

The monotony of the boy's day is broken only by a stop of a few minutes to fling his dinner down his throat.

The CHILD without a childhood

There are more than two millions of child-laborers in this country—child slaves, forced to toil from morning till night with undeveloped, half-starved bodies and minds that become degenerate. Their cry for help is voiced in November Cosmopolitan by

Edwin Markham

Piling toward the collieries instead of toward the schoolhouse.

The Girl who travels ALONE

It was the proud boast of all zealous Americans for many years that this was a country in which a young woman might safely travel from sea to sea without a companion, as chivalrous were our men, so helpful and hospitable were our women. Europeans, hearing this boast, often remained unconvinced.

This theory held good up to a decade or two ago. Could it be confidently counted upon at the present day? An answer to this question will be found in Eleanor Gates' series of articles on "The Girl Who Travels Alone," the first installment of which appears in this issue of the Cosmopolitan. This magazine has presented many articles on social conditions, but in none has there been so widespread and vital an interest as there will be in "The Girl Who Travels Alone." And this is for the reason that the problem reaches into every household where there are girls to safeguard. Miss Gates, who is the author of that charming study of Western life, "The Biography of a Prairie Girl," and of the no less carefully drawn "The Woman," is a young woman of the West, who has also lived several years in New York. She has crossed the continent eight times. When she tells of the experiences of the lone girl traveler, she knows what she is writing about. At the same time her work is done with the delicacy of a graceful and uplifting womanhood.

GOV. GUILD DODGES STATE ISSUES TO ATTACK HEARST

First Republican Campaign Speeches in Plymouth County Made at Hingham by Guild and Long.

When the speaker took the stand in the hall of the Hingham Hotel, he was met by a large number of people, many of whom were familiar with him. He was introduced by Mr. J. W. Long, of the Plymouth County Republican Committee. Mr. Guild then delivered a speech in which he attacked the administration of Governor Hearst and the policies of the State House. He stated that the State House was a "house of horrors" and that the Governor was a "tyrant" who was "oppressing the people." He also attacked the policies of the State House, particularly the "taxation without representation" and the "restriction of the franchise." He concluded his speech by stating that he was a Republican and that he was proud to be a member of the Republican Party.

Moran Says of Gov. Guild:

Guild declared in this hall that the fight was not on State issues. I tell Governor Guild that neither Roosevelt, nor Hearst, nor Bryan are involved in this campaign.

STATEMENT.
The W. F. Doll Manufacturing Co. was established 30 years ago, selling directly to the consumer "DOLL" solid gold 14 and 18 K. watch cases with Waltham and Doll movements, and a comprehensive variety of jewelry, set and unset diamonds and precious stones, selling direct to the consumer at factory prices, from which the caption originated, "Factory to Pocket".
